

Admiral UK enhances its cover for household customers

Admiral Group's UK business, Admiral Insurance, has enhanced its household policy to offer even more customers support in home emergency situations.

Any customer who is required to evacuate their home by a local authority or the emergency services will now be able to claim for the reasonable cost of alternative accommodation for all household members, including their pets, until the emergency is over.

The policy update gives customers peace of mind that if, for example, a gas explosion occurs nearby they can make a claim for alternative accommodation even if their home has not been directly damaged by the explosion.

David Fowkes, Head of Household Underwriting said, "Everyone deserves to have access to a safe home and in line with our purpose to help more people to look after their future, we've enhanced the cover we offer customers to provide them with certainty that they will still have a roof over their head if the worst were to happen. This change means we can be there for more customers and their loved ones when they need us the most."

The change of policy applies to all home insurance customers who have buildings cover. For more details on the policy visit here.
